Continuous Performance

Vaudeville, so we are all assured, is dead. Nonsense! Not while there are ducks in Stanley Park. We caught their act the other day and we're happy to be able to report—in case you haven't seen it lately—that the Spring Show is just as comic as ever. Maybe more so.

Our small daughter, seeing the turn for the first time, heartily concurs. Such was her enthusiasm, in fact, that only a fence prevented her from getting into the act herself.

As you know, the show is a definite smash, a natural. Lots of change of pace, for one thing. Take the swans' imitation of the Navy—if you ever saw a warship coasting into harbor! Dignity, armed might . . . AND they can fly, admiral!

For melodrama, the seagulls have never been better. They do the Wicked Villain, stealing the bread from the Mouths of the Wife and Kiddies, to perfection . . . and how it burns up the ducks!

If you want to take in a sideshow or two, there's no extra charge. Bears to the right, muskrat up ahead, otter and beaver on the Very Early and Very Late performances.

But the ducks are best of all. They're clowns to the last Drake; bright-eyed, saucy extroverts . . . and plainly, the men spend far too much on clothes.

They're good for what ails you. The cure is even faster if you take along a child.

Don't forget the paper bag with dried bread in it!

Boss: "Glad to see you're getting down on time now, Smith."

Smith: "Yes, sir. It's easy since I bought a parrot."

Boss: "A parrot? I thought you were going to buy an alarm clock."

Smith: "Oh, I did buy the clock. But after three days I began sleeping right through the bell. So now when I go to bed I put the clock on top of the parrot's cage. And believe me, what that bird says when the alarm goes off would wake anyone up!"

Patient: "Why are all the shades down, doc?"

Doctor: "There's a big fire across the street and I don't want you to come out of the anaesthetic thinking the operation's been a failure."

A perplexing problem nowadays is how to support the government and a wife on the same income.
