BACK ISSUES

The Buzzer turned 98 on June 2! In this section, we mine the back issues for historical treats. Enjoy!

The June 30, 1967 edition of The Buzzer celebrated the opening of the Kensington Transit Centre. The what?

Today, Friday, June 30, buses begin to operate out of Kensington Transit Centre. This is a new transportation centre at Sprott and Kensington in Burnaby. The site was selected as central to serve the Burnaby-New Westminster Area. The old bus centre at the foot of 12th Street hill in New Westminster has been closed.

Kensington Transit Centre consists of almost eight acres of property. There is a garage building of 12,000 square feet where a crew of 18 service-men and mechanics will operate three shifts a day, seven days a week to service and maintain 80 buses which are now operating out of the centre. Ultimate capacity is 200 buses.

The Kensington Transit Centre would close in 1986 after 19 years of service and its operations would move to the brand-new Burnaby Transit Centre at 3855 Kitchener Street.

Railway Avenue

TransLink provides funding to municipalities through the Major Road Network and Bike Minor Capital Program. The opening of the Railway Avenue Greenway in Richmond is an example of the projects eligible for this funding. Mayor Brodie, MLA Linda Reid and Vice-Chair of the TransLink Board of Directors, Howard Nemtin, attended the June 7th event to officially open the new 3.7 km multi-use pathway for cyclists, pedestrians and transit users.

The Buzzer celebrates its 98th birthday!

The Buzzer published its very first issue on June 2nd, 1916—without a name I might add—by the British Columbia Electric Railway Company. It was simply titled, "Wanted—A Name" and a contest was held to find a name.

You guessed it! The Buzzer was the winner and it was unveiled in the following issue. Eleven different people received a $2 first prize for suggesting the name!

The Buzzer was launched to help advertise the advantages of taking streetcars over jitneys, private citizens who patrolled streetcar routes and offered rides for five cents. Jitneys were banned in July 1918, but the Buzzer kept going and is now in its 98th year in print! Happy Birthday!

Wanted—A Name  The Buzzer

There's money in this for you. See back page.

The Buzzer's logo for its very first issue and then it's logo in the second issue!

Don't Touch the Operator

In March, the Metro Vancouver Transit Police launched a campaign aimed at bringing awareness to assaults and harassment towards bus operators called "Don't Touch the Operator."

The message is clear. Any harassment, intimidation, threats, or assaults on bus operators will not be tolerated, and that the Transit Police will vigorously investigate all reports.

The campaign will run indefinitely and includes ongoing efforts from each of the agencies involved. Decals will be placed in all Coast Mountain Buses displaying strong messages that speak to the issue.

If you witness any violent or unruly behavior towards bus operators, please report it as soon as possible to Transit Police via text message at 87-77-77* or call 604-515-8300.

*Texting is free. However, standard carrier rates may apply.

Introducing: Burrard Otter II, our new SeaBus!

The Burrard Otter II is the first SeaBus to be built to a Classification Society Standard (Lloyd's Register), and it was designed by noted Vancouver, B.C.-based naval architectural firm Robert Allan Ltd.

The vessel has just completed sea trials in Singapore, and will soon be prepared for shipment to Vancouver on a BBC Chartering heavylift carrier. The new SeaBus will arrive at Port Metro Vancouver by late July.

Before being put into service, the Burrard Otter II will go through more sea trials to make sure it's in tip top shape and SeaBus employees will be trained on operations and maintenance of the new vessel.

Following an inspection by Transport Canada, the Burrard Otter II will go into regular service, currently scheduled for fall.

The Burrard Otter II will share duties with the Burrard Pacific Breeze, which made its maiden voyage on December 23, 2009. The original Burrard Otter will be retired from active service, and the Burrard Beaver will be retrofitted and used as a spare vessel.

Canada Day service

On Tuesday, July 1, 2014 all transit will run on a Sunday/holiday schedule. West Coast Express and AirCare Inspection Centres will not be in operation. Service returns to regular weekday schedules on Wednesday, July 2. For more information, please visit www.translink.ca/holiday-service.
